

Your Someone Will Appear When You Pursue You

by Eclia Mai

A person can love you and not like you A person can be fond of you but not really care for you.

A person can even do things for you but not with the intention of being forever with you.

Don't confuse love with kindness.
Don't think a showing of concern is an indication to commit to something more deeper because it's what you want.
They may not.

When someone is not interested in you, in the way that you are interested in them. It is not the end of the world.
It is the ending of a false expectation and the beginning of freeing yourself for other pursuits and possibilities.

The most important thing is to know is your someone is out there. Waiting for both of you to discover each other. The thing is to live your life.

Be present, be authentic, be active.
Pursue the things you are interested in and if you have no interests. It's time to develop some for yourself.

Others will find it interesting to know what invigorates you. Because they are at those places of interest pursuing those things that energize them. That spark of electricity for the two of you will explode! Just be ready.

But, for now. Enrich yourself with learning about different things.
Enjoy yourself finding that inner joy that comes from learning yourself.
Expect the best and give the best in all that you pursue. And, before you know it, the best yet, will come to you.