

I string colored beads where the scarcity once stood

By Helena Trifillis

I string colored beads where the scarcity once stood
And all around
There is nothing
The same nothing as before

I bleed purple flowers
Where the barren once stood
Small purple flowers
Through cracks in clay earth

No change
But peace

And every iteration of grassland
Of desert rock
Every faraway hill

Sacred to me now