

Stop

the inner turns you turn to face the mountain ash your father planted when you were six thick red berries you are

six

under bark each beetle finds a home in the poem you are before you were born

wild poppies wait

© Gail Langstroth

