

ANDREA HUPPERT

Biography

A native of Baltimore, I have studied at the Maryland Institute College of Art, The Towson Fine Art School, Harford Community College and with a variety of professional instructors.

My early painting style was traditional realism rendered in oil but eventually I chose to explore the possibilities of watercolor and began exhibiting my work professionally in 1984. During this period I gained acceptance into many juried competitions and won numerous awards. While an active member of several watercolor societies I also helped establish and run a co-operative gallery in Baltimore for four years.

In 1996 watercolor led to mixed media as I began to destroy and re-purpose unresolved paintings and add layers of collage. These collages evolved into wall-hung dioramas that incorporated painted papers and fabrics, found objects and small, hand-built sculptures which I continued to explore until 2003.

After an extended hiatus, I resumed two-dimensional painting primarily in acrylic with some mixed media. This body of work was on exhibit at Fleckenstein Gallery in Baltimore for 5 years.

Currently I am painting in encaustic and energized by the unpredictability and luminosity of this new medium.

I have worked as a muralist/decorative painter since 1995 and continue to do so now on a limited basis
