ARTIST STATEMENT

For over 25 years, Jen Snyder has explored the intersection of light, memory, and form through fine art photography. With a practice rooted in both technical mastery and poetic observation, Jen's work examines the subtle tensions between reality and the abstract, often drawing on themes from nature, motion, and emotion.

Originally trained in black and white film photography, Jen began her photographic journey in the analog darkroom, developing a deep love for process and material. This foundation continues to inform her work today, even after embracing the digital camera. Her images are known for their quiet intensity, narrow depth of field, and an ability to evoke introspection.

Jen's work has been exhibited in several galleries, and is held in several private collections. She has been featured in multiple books and local magazines, and has received recognition through many photography awards and inclusion in juried exhibitions. In addition to her practice, Jen has contributed to the arts community as an educator and mentor.

Now based in Harford County, MD, Jen Snyder continues to push the boundaries of visual storytelling, creating imagery that invites viewers to pause, reflect, and reimagine the world around them.
